"A man is a man, and I never took my wife with me on the sites. I lived alone. Sometimes I could pick up a girl. I used to drink. After work I'd have a few beers. I'd go off to bars. And in bars, there are women. Sometimes I may have taken a woman. But I often used condoms. Because after a month I would go home to Ouagadougou where my wife and I would make love. But condoms aren't totally safe. You can wear one, and on penetration it can break. And there you are..."

"SIDA" belongs to "8", a feature film made up of 8 stories.

In partnership with the United Nations Development Programme, "SIDA" highlights one of the 8 Objectives of the Millennium: "Combat HIV/AIDS". The goal of these Objectives is to reduce by half extreme poverty by 2015. Each of the 8 internationally renowned directors has "carte blanche" to treat an objective.
